Master Builders brings the green building message to Shepparton

Builders are invited to join a forum in Shepparton on 26 September promoting sustainable and energy efficient building.

Master Builders' Green Living Road Show will bring the highly successful Green Living Conference to regional Victoria. The road show will feature the most popular speakers from the conference including:

- Boris Iskra from Wood Solutions who will discuss Six Star and the best ways to maintain an energy rating while reducing embodied energy using raised timber floors;
- Blair Freeman, a House Energy Consultant from Energy Leaks who will talk about how to make the most of Six Star designs by minimising draughts and poorly installed insulation; and
- Rod Lovett, Member Services and Education Officer with the National Electrical and Communications Association who will focus on the National Construction Code and lighting requirements for houses.

Also speaking at the road shows will be Master Builders' Sustainable Building Adviser Dr Phil Alviano.

"With the introduction of the Carbon Tax, we are hearing from more and more builders wanting to know how they can streamline their sustainable building practices and save money for themselves and their clients," Dr Alviano said.

The Shepparton road show is one of a series of regional Green Living Builder events that will run until February next year.
